EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Occupational Health and Safety Act (OSHA) sets out minimum health and safety standards to protect workers against hazards on the job. It applies to almost every worker, supervisor, employer and workplace in Ontario, including constructors, workplace owners, and suppliers of equipment or materials to workplaces that are covered by the OHSA. As the employer, the Hamilton Police Services Board recently completed training from the Public Services Health and Safety Association (PSHA) to meet its obligations under the Act. Further, the Hamilton Police Service (HPS) is compliant with its obligations under OSHA as detailed below.

INFORMATION

The OSHA sets out minimum standards for employers, specifically, the establishment of an internal responsibility system (IRS) and establishing measures and procedures for dealing with workplace hazards. The OSHA legislates the structure, function and responsibilities of the JHSC which we are compliant. Specifically, the HPS has established a Joint Health and Safety Committee (JHSC) comprised of members selected by the Hamilton Police Association (HPA) and members representing the HPS. This joint committee operates under official terms of reference and is co-chaired by one representative of management and one representative of the HPA. All members of the committee have received training and eight members have received their certification training. The JHSC meets quarterly and minutes are recorded and circulated. As part of this committee, workplace inspections are completed by members of the committee. These inspections are tracked and used to ensure mitigation of hazards are rectified. As required in the Act, the HPS has posted the Occupational Health and Safety Act, Health and Safety at Work poster, and names and locations of the JHSC members. We also include contact numbers on bulletin boards throughout the workplace. These required items are also posted on our intranet for easy access by our Members.

Additionally, all Members of the HPS complete health and safety training as part of their onboarding and as part of planned refreshers. Supervisors complete enhanced training detailing their responsibilities under the Act. In addition, in our effort to prevent further accidents, the Occupational Health team reviews all reported incidents. This review forms the substance for our monthly health and safety talks. Monthly health and safety talks provide education, awareness and expectations to all Members. An example of a health and safety talk would be prior to the winter months, the safety talk was on slips, trips and falls. This talk focused on prevention of having an incident. Monthly health and safety talks are distributed via must read and are stored on our intranet for future reference.

Health and Safety is paramount in the protection of our workers and the HPS is compliant with its obligations under the Act.
